Saturday, February 16. 1723.

London, February 16.
Yesterday arrived a Mail from Holland.

Constantinople, January 5.
On the 27th past, the Grand Vizier received Letters from the Governour of Babylon, giving an Account, that the Civil and Military Subjects of Persia conceiving a general Dislike to the Government of their late King, have withdrawn their Obedience from it, and set up the noted Misi Ways for their Sovereign; that he has made himself Master of Isphahan, and has put the old Sophy to Death and his two Sons. Some Days past, two Expresses arrived here from Moscow, one for the Russian Resident, the other for the Marquess de Bonac, Ambassador of France: The latter was dispatched from M. de Campredon, the French Minister at the Czar's Court. As yet nothing material is discovered of the Contents of these Expresses, neither is it clearly known upon what Foot Affairs stand between the Muscovites and the Ottoman Porte. The Marquess de Bonac has complained to the Grand Vizier of Violences committed against all the French Consuls in the several Islands of the Archipelago, those of Scio and Metelene excepted; demanding that they should be re-established in the Execution of their Functions, upon Account of their being extremely useful, and purposely established for the Protection of the Subjects and Commerce of the French Nation, according to Agreement: To which the Grand Vizier answered, That the English, and other Nations their Allies, carry on at least as great a Trade as do the French in the Ottoman Empire, without employing any Consul in those Islands, therefore the Marquess would do well to desist from his Demand. The Cadis of Smyrna, Metelene, and of the Schala Nuova, obtained formerly, upon some slight Reason or other, the Grand Signior's Order, forbidding the Exportation of Corn towards Christian Countries; but the Ottoman Ministers are since informed, that those Cadis and other Officers at the Ports in the Archipelago, make Gain by that Prohibition, by suffering Corn to be exported, in Consideration of some private Gratifications to themselves, so that notwithstanding that Prohibition, the French and other Nations find Means to export Corn as before: Upon which, the Grand Vizier has thought proper to permit an open Trade for the free Exportation of Corn on Payment of Custom outwards, viz. Five Paras, or Pence of this Country for every Measure containing about 22 or 23 Pounds weight. 'Tis reported, that the King of Persia's third Son fled to Ghylon, with a few of his Adherents after the Massacre of his Father and two Brothers.

Rosloc, Feb. 9. The Duke of Mecklenbourg having sent an Express lately from Dantzick to the Governour and Regency of Domitz with Dispatches of Importance, they have been intercepted; and Matters of Consequence being contained in them, they are sent to Vienna. The Duke is at length determined to go to the Czar, who, by the last Advice from Moscow, which are of the 19th past, seems more disposed to favour him than before. 'Tis said, that the Czar is resolved to go to Qlonitz to drink the Waters, and from thence to Perekubourg to look into the State of his Marine. Letters from Courland say, that it has been rumoured there, that the Turks have already begun Hostilities against the Muscovites, the Crime Tartars having by their Direction entered Russia; and that 'tis the general Discourse at Moscow, that the Czar has a Design to attack Asoph, in case the Ottoman Porte will Attempt to dispossess him of his new Acquisitions in Georgia.

Bern, Feb. 13. The Pope's Nuncio is gone from Lucerne, having excommunicated the Magistrates, whom he styles Rebels to the Church, upon Account of their publishing an Ordinance fixing the Portion of Women educated in Nunneries: The Nuncio has also freed the Subject from their Oath of Fidelity, and interdicted all the Churches, and they are actually shut up. 'Tis now reported, that the Magistrates have sent higher Deputies, and 'tis upon that Occasion the Grand Council is to meet To-Day, to deliberate, as 'tis supposed, concerning the Nuncio's Excommunication; mean time, this Canton and that of Zurich, are disposed to stand by the Magistrates of Lucerne, and shelter them against the Thunder of the Vatican.

His Royal Highness was afterwards complimented by the Clergy, Nobility, the Councils, Magistrates of the City, and Officers of the Garrison.
